ABSTRACT

The formation of the legal structure of society and legal socialization is incredibly important in determining the degree of development of legal relations. An in-depth study of the processes of legal socialization provides an opportunity to correctly assess the degree of formation of its constituent elements, to conduct more effective research on the phenomenon of legal socialization. We can look into legal consciousness and legal culture as the most important structural elements of the legal socialization process. In this article, we will philosophically analyze the essence and means of legal socialization of a person in the formation of modern civil society. In that investigated the dialectical relationship between legal consciousness and legal culture in the process of legal socialization, the problems of formation of legal consciousness and legal culture and their role in the system of legal socialization, as well as the impact and importance of deviant behavior on the process of legal socialization.
