ABSTRACT

One of the classic philosophical problems is the problem of alienation. Paradoxically, it is both an abstract and an actual practical problem at the same time. We believe that its relevance is particularly expressed in anthropological, social and methodological terms. The anthropological plan of relevance lies in the fact that concrete forms of alienation do not theoretically, not abstractly, but actually affect a person both at the social and individual levels of his existence. And these manifestations are felt one way or another, even if a person does not know that he is faced with what in philosophical language is called alienation, alienation, in view of which alienation is a problem to which one cannot be indifferent.
