ABSTRACT

This article discusses the specifics of journalists working with information sources. Their rights and freedoms, as well as conflicts in dealing with sources of information, were discussed. The journalist must thoroughly study the topic or event before presenting the material to the public. But it will take time. Unlike other types of media, online journalists have a tradition of disseminating information quickly, at least publishing the first details of the incident.

KEYWORDS: Appeal, audience, internet, journalist, journalistic investigation, law, source of information.
