

NOTE-TAKING AS AN ACTIVE LISTENING TECHNIQUE IN TEACHING EFL LEARNERS

Sidirova Janar Umirbekovna*; Narbekova Elvira Yerkaliyevna*

*Teacher,

Department of the Russian Language and Literature,
Navoi State Pedagogical Institute,
UZBEKISTAN

Teacher,

Department of the Practical Course of the English Language,
Navoi State Pedagogical Institute,
UZBEKISTAN

Email id: narbekova_e@mail.ru

DOI: 10.5958/2249-7315.2022.00238.6

ABSTRACT

This article discusses an important role of note-taking in teaching EFL learners active listening to formulate students listening skills in EFL environment. Note-taking as an active listening method of teaching and learning in which students improve their listening skills.

KEYWORDS: Listening Comprehension, Passive Listeners, Focused Listening, Post-Listening, Note Taking.

REFERENCES

1. Barker Larry et al. An Investigation of Proportional Time Spent in Various Communication Activities by College Students // Journal of Applied Communication Research, 1980, №8
2. De Vito Joseph A. Human Communication. New York: Harper and Row Publishers, 1988, pp.63-64
3. Dunkel P. and Pialorsi F. Advanced Listening Comprehension. Developing Aural and Note-Taking Skills. Cambridge: Newbury House Publishers, 1982.
4. Dyuzhikova Ekaterina A. Listening Comprehension: In Search of Effective Methods of Teaching // ESP/ BESIG RUSSIA, 2000, June, pp.54-57.
5. Fajardo Clara P. Note-taking. A Useful Device // Forum, 1996, Vol.34, No.2, pp.22-25.
6. Grellet, F. Developing Reading Skills: A Practical Guide to Reading Comprehension Exercises. Cambridge: Newbury House Publishers, 1982.
7. Minaeva Ludmila. "I'm All Ears": Development of Listening Comprehension Skills in the EFL Class // ESP/BESIG RUSSIA, 2000, №12, pp.3-4.